MULTI-FAMILY USAGE

Over the past forty years, there has been consistent annual population growth in both Clatsop County and the City of Seaside. A Portland State University study predicts that between 2018 and 2038, Seaside's population growth rate will be higher than the County average. In the past five years, the population of residents, particularly those between the ages of 18 and 29, has doubled, increasing demand for reasonably priced rental homes. Over the past 20 years, Seaside's poverty rate has decreased and is currently lower than the Oregon State and Clatsop County averages. Between $35,000 and $75,000 is the household income range for 50% of renters.

CURRENT HOUSING SUPPLY MARKET

With population growth exceeding supply, less than 5% of Clatsop County's present housing stock was constructed in the past ten years. In general, Seaside currently has an adequate quantity of homes. A closer look reveals that the existing inventory is incorrect in terms of housing type. Most of the new housing constructed in the last few decades has been single-family dwellings intended for short-term rentals. There is a housing shortage for permanent residents as a result of investors bidding up and purchasing these brand-new homes.
